It is a well-known fact that you face a steep learning curve during your articling year. You'll be working in a new environment, meeting new colleagues, and dealing with unfamiliar office systems and procedures. You'll also be applying your legal training in a real world setting for the first time, and learning to manage your workload. These are just a few of the experiences that make your articling year an exciting and challenging time in your career. While there are no shortcuts, there are strategies that you can employ to help you perform at a high level and hone the skills you require.

We've collected 20 strategies (a.k.a. "tips and tricks") that our own students and new associates recommend as their secrets to success. Visit the Student Life section on our website at www.ahbl.ca/students to find out how you can prepare for, successfully manage, and get the most out of your articling experience.
